Subject: EOCCG Update 17: Planned Truck Demonstration

Good evening,

There were less protesters today and those that were out were less aggressive than those from Saturday. As such, By-law and Regulatory Services were able to resume their work supporting Police as part of the Quick Response Teams.

Two small convoys of vehicles (mostly passenger vehicles) departed this morning from Coventry and the Canadian Tire Centre. These were the "Blue Collar Convoys" that were meant to join protesters downtown. Both were met with some resistance by counter-protests; however, it was the Coventry convoy that was actually stopped by counter-protesters at Riverside Drive and Bank Street. A Police Liaison Team was on-site all day to ensure that the situation did not escalate and by mid-afternoon, additional police were brought in to enhance support. There were no incidents and currently, that intersection is clear.

A decision was made not to replace the fencing at the National War Memorial as it could represent a danger if further removal attempts are made. Instead, partners, including the federal government, will continue to monitor the area and will pursue investigations into any acts of wrong-doing.

The EOC will be supporting the NCRCC and Ottawa Police Service to help vehicles leave Ottawa residential streets, as per the agreement negotiated between the Mayor's office and the Freedom Convoy 2022 organizers. City staff, service partners, and residents have started to share heightened feelings of anxiety, fear, and exhaustion specific to living and working in the red zone. The City's Home & Community Care partners have had to reduce the number of staff working within the perimeter, for that reason. There have also been isolated incidents of workers being confronted by protesters, and being challenged for wearing PPE. In addition to encouraging that all incidents be reported to the Police, the City is working with internal and external partners to ensure appropriate supports are available to staff, workers and residents.

Today, the EOC, on behalf of the City's Workplace Safety and Compliance team, sent out guidance to the Duty Officer Network related to air quality issues, noise, and extreme cold weather.
